THE UPRISING OF 1857 IN SIRSA DISTRICT

Dr. Rakesh Kumar, Dr. Sheetal Meena
History Lecturer, Dept Of History, GSSS Dhanoo Sirsa, Haryana, India
Doctorate, Research Scholar DAVV Indore, M.P., India

The British rule of half a century from 1803 to 1857 produced a great deal of discontent and disaffection among the people. Their destruction of the village communities. The panchayats and Natural leaders brought social instability in the society: their economic policy of exploitation caused pauperization of the masses; the work of the Christian missionaries. Who were supported by the British Government officials, caused consternation in the mind of the people. The regular visitations of the terrible famines and deadly epidemics had made the life of the people intolerable unhappy and miserable. These and many other factors prepared the ground for revolt. It only required a spark for the bursting forth of a great conflagration. causes of mutiny and failure of mutiny

Keywords: The uprising, of 1857, in Sirsa, district, causes, mutiny, failure

The British rule of half a century from 1803 to 1857 produced a great deal of discontent and disaffection among the people. Their destruction of the village communities. The panchayats and Natural leaders brought social instability in the society: their economic policy of exploitation caused pauperization of the masses; the work of the Christian missionaries. Who were supported by the British Government officials, caused consternation in the mind of the people. The regular visitations of the terrible famines and deadly epidemics had made the life of the people intolerable unhappy and miserable. These and many other factors prepared the ground for revolt. It only required a spark for the bursting forth of a great conflagration. (1)

The Settlement officer of the British East India company fixed land revenue at more than 50% of the total production without consulting or having consent of the chaudharies in any way. The collection were made in February and September long before the harvest when the present had practically nothing with them in cash or in kind. The collections became, at times, oppressive which impelled the peasant to desert their villages. In the revenue records, a large number villages during this period are shown as ‘Be-Charagh’ (without lamps) which shows the plight of the village folk. The peasants were thus compelled to go to sahukass and the money lenders to borrow money to pay their land revenue. The money lenders charged the exorbitant rate of interest and exploited the borrowers and at times deprived them of their holdings. The popular panchayats were divested of judicial powers and the British courts started administering justice which was foreign, costly and time-consuming. Like the villagers, the urbanites who were engaged in professions of trade, craft, industry, service and labour (mostly of them depending upon agriculture) also became victim of injurious economic policy of the British resulting in scenes of dirty and deserted places in towns. (2)

The outbreak of the mutiny at Meerut and the massacre at Delhi on the 11th of May 1857 took the Sirsa district completely by surprise till then things had been going on just as usual, and crime was so well suppressed that even cases of cattle-lifting, formally so prevalent, were rare. So soon as the capture of Delhi by the mutineers became known, the banyans and other residents of the town of Sirsa began to leave it and flee for refuge to Bikaner territory, taking their property with them, yet for a time not a single case of robbery occurred. There was then stationed at Sirsa a detachment of cavalry and infantry of the Haryana local battalion, whose head-quarters were at Hansi in the Hisar district. The authorities had no great confidence in their loyalty, and partly to guard against them, partly to reassure the people, the customs peons called in and the defense of the town was entrusted to the Bhatti Nawab of Rania, the pensioned descendant of Zabta Khan from whom the country had been taken in 1818. On the 29th May the Haryana Bhattiion at Hansi they could lay Hand on. On the following day the detachment at Sirsa received intimation of the occurrence and immediately showed signs of disaffection, the European residents, who had been expecting. This and had received notice of the outbreak at Hansi a few hours before it reached the troops, at once took to flight without any opposition from the sepoys. Captain Robertson the superintendent of Bhattiion with his family went by Dabwali and Bhatinda to Firozpur in number, many of then women and children, started from sohuwala under the leadership of Mr. Donald, assistant superintendent, and being joined there by Mr. Bowles custom patrol, reached Rori (3) after some trouble from the inhabitants of Thiraj and other villages who threatened them as they passed. At Rori the partly took refuge in the small mud ford, and were compelled by the disaffected attitude of the towns people to shut the gate and stand sentries. They could not procure food from the town and were prevented from getting water from the well outside. But in the darkness of the night, Baba Janki Das, a Fakir of the place, brought them supplies of water and flour and passed them through the aperture under the fort gates. (4) The party was thus enabled to hold out until the arrival of some Patiala troops, who escorted them to a place of safety in Patiala territory. They were hospitably treated by the Patiala authorities until the restoration of order enabled them to return to Sirsa. The only Europeans left at Sirsa were captain Hilliard, the officer commanding the Detachment, and his brother in law, Mr. Feel, Assistant patrol. These gentlemen were not at Sirsa, when the other left it. They had gone out with some troops towards Jodhka to suppress some local disturbance, and were brought back to Sirsa by their men. The mutineers refused to obey captain Hilliard’s orders, but supplied him with money and... allowed him and Mr. Fell to depart unmolested. They were, however, treacherously murdered by the Muhammadan in habitants of chatryan, a small village beyond Sohuwala. The mutineers when left to them selves, plundered the treasury of some Rs. 8000 but without much other violence marched off to join their comrades at Hansi. (5)

The Hindu inhabitants of the town of Sirsa fled in dismay chiefly to Bikaner territory, and the muhammadan population of the surrounding village rose in masse and began to plunder the town and the neighbouring Hindu villages. The Tahsildar of Sirsa, the revenue Saristhadar and the Kotwali muharrir were murdered, and the records of the district office were town and scattered about, but most of them were afterwards recovered and comparatively few of them were altogether destroyed and comparatively few of them were altogether destroyed. The destruction of property was most wanton. Whatever the insurgents were unable to carry away they burned or broke the pieces and for a time the most violent portion of the population had it all its own way. (6)

The Bhattis of Sirsa at once took advantage of the subversion of British rule to revert to their old predatory habits and the district was at once plunged into utter anarchy and confusion. (7)

This situation did not last for long. After a short while, general van Cortlandt, the deputy Commissioner of Firozepur, attack the district on instruction from John Lawrence. The chief commissioner of Punjab. His forces consisted of 670 men and two guns. Captain Robertson acted as a political officer under him. The General started his operation with the parganas of Sirsa where he encountered opposition from Nur sumad Khan, the Nawab of Rania. A pitched battle was fought at Odhan, a small village near Rania on June 17. The Nawab's men fought but the British firearms played a vital role in the contest. As many as 530 of the Nawab's men fell fighting as the victory went to van court land. The Nawab effected his escape but he was caught while passing through the Ludhiana district and condemned to death by hanging at Ferozepure Cant. (8) Nawab's tomb still stand here. (9)

On June 18, the British attacked the village of chatryan were lieut. Hillard and Mr. Fell were killed. The attack was so sudden that the villagers could neither come out to fight nor run away to save their lives they were massacred and their house were burnt to ashes. (10)

June 19, General van courtlandt seconded by Lieut. G. Pearsof the madras artillery attack Kaireka, a village on the Ghaggar, where the people had already got the information of the British onslaught on Chhatrayan. They mobilized them selves to thousands and put up a stift residence to the British on the outskirts of the village. The village of saharana, situated on the left bank of the dry bed of Ghaggar river, also was strongly occupied by the Bhattis. (11) Kaireka, like all villages in this part of of the region, was very strong, each portion being surrounded by a deep ditch with strong embankment and paving the gateway. General van courtlandt detailed the lieut (12) pearse to the left to prevent the portion of the Bhattis who occupied the village Saharana from reinforcing the villages of Khaireka Jawahir Singh's troops under lieut. Sadlier on the left, two guns under lieut walcott in the centre, the new levies under captain Bloomfield with Lieut. Hunt as second in command on the extreme right resulting in the death of five person while four were taken prisoners. About 250 were killed and 18 wounded person were made prisoners. The loss of the British was slight, with six killed and 33 wounded. the destruction was so immense that the Lambard of all the surrounding villages attended to them and the villages brought water and supplies for the force. The British contingent them entered Sirsa on 20th June. (15) Sirsa was reached when the Bikaner contingent of 800 men and two guns, loyally sent to our aid by the Raja of Bikaner, marched in as a reinforcement. The civil organization of the district was at once-re-established, and in a short time things reverted to their former state.

Meanwhile on June 21st, a force of 400 Bikaner horse and two guns, under Lieutenant pearse, was sent on to garrison Hissar on 8th July. After restoring order at Sirsa and leaving.

Mr. Oliver there as superintendent of Bhattachian, General van courtland marched via Fatehabad for Hissar, which he reached on the 17th, having halted six lays at Fatehabad to receive the submission of revolted pachadas. (16)

The taking of about twenty days in suppressing this historical movement in Sirsa town and its adjoining villages is an ample proof of at what large scale, the massco fo this region had put up a stift resistance to the British. (17)

With the uprising the revolution of 1857 many people of Sirsa became martyrs as is clear from the following table 2. No. of Martyrs upto July 8, 1857 (18)
Dated | Place | Dead
--- | --- | ---
17.06.1857 | Battle with in Odhan courtland. | 225
18.06.1857 | Battle with in Khaireka courtland | 200
18.06.1857 | The British attacked the villages Chhatrayan | 150
19.06.1857 | Battle with courtland in Kharia | 300
08.07.1857 | They had to struggle hard in the village of Jodhka

The mutiny failure cause:

This practically concluded the military operation in the district, and thereafter it began gradually to settle down but the Haryana, field force was not finally broken up till May 1st, 1858. The musalman of the Ghaggar valley and of the district generally, finding the forces of order non existent, rose to plunder their weaker and less-spirited neighbours.

The neighbouring states of Patiala and Bikaner sent considerable bodies of troops to aid the authorities, and through their service were not of a very valuable kind, still the fact showed a feeling of loyalty on the part of these states, which should never be forgotten. They also accorded a ready refuge to fugitives and treated them with hospitality.

The rebellions element thus crushed General van courtland established order throughout the district. The work of persecution also went side by side the proprietary right of seven village-Mangala, Jamalpur, Hajimpur, Odhan, Chatrian, Kharian, and Jodhkan were forfeited while heavy fines were levied on scores of other villages. He hanged nearly 133 person and confiscated their properties. The Nawab's family was the worst sufferer. Besides Samad Khan, his cousin Gauhar Ali was arrested and hanged at Sirsa on August 18, 1857.

His relatives and allies, Nawab Wazir Khan, Amir Ali Khan, Saba Khan and Umrao Alikhan were hanged at Hisar. Ali Khan cousin of Nur Samed was given life sentence. Fearing ill fate hundred of person ran away to distant place Sardar Singh He did good services during the muting by sheltering Europeans and co-operating against the rebels. The inferior police official and customs peons either deserted their officers on activity combined for plunder, but the native official of the district seem to have on the whole remained at their posts as long as could be expert. While several distinguished themselves by their fidelity.

Musalmman Zamindar of Darbi, Nezadela Khurd, and Nagoki were executed for the murder of the three native official at Sirsa and their land confiscated. Several villages in the Fazilka dry tract. Whose musalman owners had distinguished themselves in raids in their Hindu neighbours, were also confiscated, as were a large number of revenue-free grants on the Ghaggar whose Hindustani holders had proved disloyal in the troubles. Leaders of raiding parties were also punished with imprisonment and fine, and heavy compensation was levied from plundering villages and awarded to the plundered. While punishment was thus meted out to the turbulent, those who had rallied on the side of order were not forgotten son of the confiscated village were conferred in proprietary right on effective. The more prominent of the Bodlas and watus whose zealous and effective aid had enabled Mr. Oliver to maintain the peace at Faliza, while revenue free grants were made to number of them and to the Fakir Baba Jankidas, who had given the party of fugitives such timely aid at Rori.

The Sums recovered from the Nawab:

| (a) | Amount received from Ferozepur On account of the sale proceeding of his Property with the Nawab when fleeing | Rs. 613-14-10 |
| (b) | Amount received from the sale of his Personal property at Sirsa | Rs. 661-07-08 |
| (c) | Amount realized from the sale of his House at Rania | Rs. 883-00-00 |

| Total | Rs. 2108-06-06 |

The above collection adjusted as below:

| A (a) Amount refunded to the treasurer on account of advance made to the Nawab by order of Capt. Roberson prior to the mutiny for the protection of the town of Sirsa | Rs. 550-00-00 |
| b) Amount paid in adjustment of inefficient balance on his account | Rs 40-00-00 |
| c) Amount a warded towards the compensation of property to the people plundered by him during the mutiny. | Rs 23-14-00 |

| Rs. 613-14-00 |
B (a) Amount paid by one Kasim Ali on account of his property being sold with that of the Nawab and afterwards released

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Amount</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>b) Amount paid toward the compensation of the property plundered by the Nawab</td>
<td>Rs. 53-07-02</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>c) The whole of this item paid towards the compensation of property plundered by the Nawab</td>
<td>Rs. 608-00-06</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Total: Rs. 2108-06-06

(24)

There is a popular legend in the town that the other prisoners were kept within the barbed wire enclosure in the ground presently know as jail ground. were at present the old Bus stand, the post office, the telephone exchange and the nearby houses are located. They were tried and punished. A huge fine was levied on several people. Moreover the proprietary right over the villages viz Odhan, Chhatrayan, Kharekan and Jodhka were abolished. (25)

Thereafter, Sirsa along with Hisar, Rohtak district and a part of Jhajjar comprising Hisar Division was included in the Punjab in February 1858 (26).

The help rendered by the Bikaner ruler, the British Government awarded a khillat and granted Tibbi Pargana containing 41 village from Sirsa District to the Maharaja on April 11, 1861 Risaldar Shamsuddin Khan was killed in an action at Bellali in Haryana during the course of the uprising. The British Government, therefore, houred his son clamer-ud-khan by granting a sand with a khilat. Similarly Baba Janki Das of Rori saved the lives of 17 Europeans, for which he was granted a cash award or rupees Two thousand and 100 bighas of land in Maufi in perpetuity. He was also made a Darbari and received a chair in the Lieutenant Government Darbar (27).

For rendering service to the British Government by laying a private Camel Dak between Hisar and Sirsa timely information of movement of the uprising. Lala Fateh Chand was granted a seal in the lient (28) Government Darbar. These rewards, considered inadequate as they were, in proportion to the services rendered by Baba Janki Dass and Lala Teha Chand the British Government further granted 1000 acres of land in proprietorship of Fazilka Tehsil to each of Janki Dass and Ram Sukh Das son of Fateh Chand In 1877. The ownership of village Chhatrayan was assigned as a reward to the suthars of village Risaliya (29). The main fighting forces during the uprising had consisted of the lower strata of the society viz. peasants, custom peon, The gun carrier sepoys. The sepoys of Haryana Battalion etc. through sometimes led by the Bhatts, the Mughals etc. The socio-economic change enforced in the traditional and conventional life of this region made them discontented and rise against the British. Thus in district of Sirsa at least it was nothing short a popular movement. (30)

General van Courtland, while re-establishing British hegemony over this region, mercilessly butchered several person apart from setting many villages on fire razing to the ground. A considerable number of heroic person of this region were transported to the Anadamans besides the death sentence imposed on the Bhatt Chief.

The heroic deeds sufferings and sacrifices made by the patriotic persons of Sirsa and its adjoining area in the historic first war of independence are evidently second to none in the annals of India. 31

REFERENCES:

[5] Ibid P-43
[6] Ibid P-43
[7] Ibid P-43
[10] Foreign (Secret), 25 September 1857, National Archives Delhi, P.46
[12] Foreign (Secret), 25 September 1857, National Archives Delhi, P.48
[13] Ojha P. 46
[14] Yadav P.64
[15] Marx, Engels, the first war of independence, 1857-89 (Moscow, 1978), P.71
[16] Extracts from the district & States Gazetteers of the Punjab (India), Research society of Pakistan, University of the Punjab Lahore. P. 37, 169.
[17] Hissar Division, Principal matters, fille No. 37, Hisar archives, P 882
[18] Ibid P.883
[19] Extracts from the District & States Gazetteers of the Punjab (India) P 38, 39.
[21] Imperial Gazette of India, provincial series, Rajasthan, Superintendent of Government printing (Calcutta 1908) P.404
[22] Extract from the District & States Gazetteers of the Punjab (India) P.39
[23] J. Wilson, P.65
[24] Deputy Commissioner, Sirsa to the Commissioner, Hissar, 23 September 1859 No. 434, H.S.A.
[26] K.C. Yadav, The Revolt of 1857 in Haryana (Delhi, 1977) P. 122
[27] Ojha P.453
[28] Deputy Commissioner, Hissar file No. A/6-7, Acc No. 139 HSA.
[29] File No. A/6 II, Acc No. 140 (HSA), Haryana state archives P.9
[30] File No. A/611, Acc No.140 (HAS), Haryana state Archives. P .9
[31] Hissar Division, Principal matter, file No. 46 Haryana state Archives, P. 950.