In the present scenario every society is packed with crime and criminal the institution of prison becomes an unavoidable one. In ancient India also there were a system of prison which is used to punish the people who act against the norms, rules and laws. During British Period the Indian penal code was enacted and the punishment was awarded to the wrongdoers; even several Indians were charged under Indian penal code for the freedom fight movement. Even after Independence still now we have same penal act but the enforcement of the Indian penal code is more reformative and rehabilitation the theory of reformative is upgraded on Indian prisons. This paper is to bring out the existence of Prison reformation in the State of Tamil Nadu, Especially in Puzhal central prison.

"FREEDOM" An outlet of the PRISON BAZAAR

Central prisons in Tamil Nadu are set to become factories with the State government by establishing Prison Bazaar. The ambitious project aims at enhancing the variety, quality and quantity of prison products and making them available in the retail market. With Freedom as its brand name, the prison products will deviate from the conventional practice of catering to government departments and enter the open market.

According to prison sources, qualified trainers have been identified to expose the inmates to the use of modern technology in the manufacturing industry. While competing in the market, the Freedom brand is expected to have an edge in terms of pricing even as prison authorities maintain there will be no compromise on quality. The prison industry extends to nine central prisons, three special prisons for women and nine district jails across the State where approximately 11,000 inmates are lodged.

The bazaars were expected to use efficient marketing strategies and best commercial practices to ensure that the pricing was on a par with similar products being sold in retail outlets. The system was not only aimed at creating skilled manpower in the prisons that would enable the prisoners lead a life of dignity after their release, but also assuring them of an income from the sale of products while serving the sentence.

Conclusion

Puzhal prison is the only prison in Tamil Nadu which consists of two separate prisons for convict prisoners and the under trial prisoners; the capacity of convict prison is about 1250. But, the inmates present in it are 750 only. The under trial prison space provided for the prisoners is 1250 but it accommodated with 1858 number of prisoners, as it clearly shows the prison is overcrowded, Which leads to insufficient sanitization, water supply, food and accommodation. The reformative of the prisoners is not fully satisfied by these overall methods. As there were several amenities has been implemented for the benefit of the prisoners to change their life and mind, the outcome of it is not that much effective as which may require much more contribution from the government, prison management and even by the prisoners towards reformation.
